32nd Sunday of Ordinary Time Year A p. 85 12th November 2017

You know neither the day nor the hour (Mt 25:13)

We are created to love not to judge. Judgement belongs to God. Straight after our death we will face individual particular judgement. At that time we will not be reunited with our bodies. We will see ourselves without any mysteries. Everything will be obvious. God's presence will allow us to participate in His way of seeing things. We will not be asked about how creative we were, how much money we were able to save. We will be asked how much did we love. The measure of our particular judgement will be our love for God and our neighbour.

Have you come to co-love or co-hate?
to co-build or co-destroy?
to embrace the cross or the sword?
to help or to push your way?

Yes, I know what you say.

I know you swore not to spread bitterness;
not to mix tears with the desire to dictate.

You swore not to mix goodness with the gutter
of gossip;

not to build a tower of anger in the church.

You swore not to re-open the wounds I regret making.

I know, you did.

Do not keep your heart on hold.

Have a look. There is someone hidden in the stone.

This stone has a face. The face is searching for love.

Embrace the stone.

Before you have pushed the world down to the drain – wait!

The world is supposed to enjoy the banquet of the Lamb – do you remember?

You are supposed to be at the banquet – do you remember?

You are created to love - not to judge.

You are created to love - not to judge.

You are created to love - not to judge.

Fr Stan
